Griffin boys and girls will be putting their bathing suits, fishing poles, picnic baskets and other summer vacation equipment back into the attic and getting out the old book strap and pencils soon, for they will be heading back to school Monday morning.

Many of them will find sparkling new school buildings waiting for them and others will find additions to the buildings they left behind three short months ago.

Teachers for the coming year reported for work earlier this week and have been getting things in shape for opening day. They have been busy preparing schedules, lining up work for the coming year and other details.

Registration in all city schools was completed Friday.

Incomplete reports from the Superintendent's office today show that 1,475 students have completed registration. More are expected to report for classes Monday.

A full staff of 57 teachers will be at the city schools to begin class work.

W. B. Crawford, for the past eight years principal of the county schools in Conyers, has been elected to serve as principal of Griffin High. He will succeed Homer Sharp, former principal, who has gone to Covington.

Students at Third Ward school will find an addition to the old building when they report Monday. The expansion program there cost $50,495.

Negro students reporting to Vocational will find construction underway there also. Building additions there including a new gym, cost $98,700.

Negro students at the old Spring Hill and Cabin Creek grammar schools will find new buildings waiting for them. The school which will replace old Cabin Creek cost $104,759. The new school at Spring Hill cost $33,800.

Butts, Bryant Take Opening Tilts Serious

BY STERLING SLAFFY

If Mississippi Southern, Furman and Memphis State are the way for Southern Athletic Conference football teams to bow over this week then three coaches have been waiting a long time.

Coches Bear Bryant of Kentucky Wally Butts of Georgia and Johnny Vaught of Mississippi have been driving their squads for two weeks as Notre Dame was headed for Iowa.

By about every conceivable standard however Kentucky, Georgia and Mississippi should win their first Southeastern games of the season and give third stringers a chance to covert.

Wally Butts' Bulldogs may be the first Southeastern game of the year in Athens tonight. An hour late Vaught's Rebels meet Memphis State in Memphis where about 30,000 may turn out.

Kentucky's game against Mississippi Southern will be Saturday night in Lexington.

If Georgia holds a big lead over Furman after the first half, Coach Butts doubtlessly will begin experimenting with his droves of ood and big, but unimportant backs.

In Mid-Cook, a Tennesee by way of Drayton, Main, Butts has a great six feet, three inch, 225 pound quarterback, who thus far apparently needs only game experience to last.

I wish that every rabble rousing reporter and brushy haired editor in the East would visit Griffin’s schools this week. Of course they won’t. They're so busy trying to peddle newspapers in Harlem that they haven’t time to really take a look at the South and learn what’s happening. They'd much rather write of isolated lynchings in Georgia and such other unfortunate incidents.

When 638 Griffin Negro children returned to school this week they found as fine classrooms as any in the nation.

The old Spring Hill Grammar School has been abandoned and in its place stands the brand new Cora Nimmons Elementary School. It was named, quite appropriately, for a Negro teacher who gave her life to educating the youth of her race.

The old Cabin Creek School is no more. In its place stands the brand new John W. Moore, Sr., Elementary School. It too is named for a Negro educator, the man who founded the first Cabin Creek School.

Both these schools are modern and up to the minute with the finest in classrooms and equipment.

The 330 Negroes who reported to Vocational High found a large addition under construction and a huge new gymnasium.

These are only the latest evidences that Griffin Negroes can get fair treatment. Their school buildings now are as good as any in the nation and much better than the vast majority of schools, white or Negro, in other cities.

There is no doubt that as far as education is concerned, the Georgia law of “separate but equal” facilities is a reality.

We wish the Eastern hate mongers would take notice. But of course they won’t.

Supreme Court decision known to history as Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka (pursued by the NAACP). Marshall's strategy was twofold

- NAACP would show that segregated schools clearly were, and historically had been, unequal. NAACP would argue:
  - was not a reasonable basis for the classification of students
  - racial separation caused severe psychological damage and antisocial tendencies
  - segregation was, in fact, discriminatory and therefore in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment
Clarendon County, South Carolina. 1949-1950 school term

- Average expenditure for white students: $179; blacks: $43
- Valuation of sixty-one black schools (often no more than wooden shacks) with 6,531 students: $194,575; twelve white schools (brick and stucco) with 2,375 students: $673,850
- The county provided no transportation for the black students. Busing was provided for whites
- The average salary for white teachers was two thirds more than that for black teachers.
- The black minister/teacher who, in the late 1940s, had begun the effort for equal treatment that would end before the Supreme Court was fired from his job
- His wife, two of his sisters, and a niece also lost their jobs
- Physically threatened, and sued
- Convicted on trumped-up charges
- His house was burned down and his church stoned
• He was chased out of the county
• Other blacks involved in the case received similar treatment
• Undaunted, black plaintiffs, backed by the NAACP, sought an injunction abolishing segregation

This South Carolina case, was the first in which Marshall pursued his new strategy. The evidence of inequality was overwhelming.
Probably the most famous case ever decided by the Supreme Court, Brown v. Board of Education was the first step in major reform of not only public education but also race laws and policies in almost all aspects of American life.

-Karen M. McDearman
University of Mississippi
In the momentous case of Brown V. Board of Education. The court ruled in 1955 that public schools in the southern and border states must desegregate “with all deliberate speed,” a rather ambiguous timetable at best and one that Georgia political leaders apparently interpreted as never.

Fairmont Students March On GHS

More than 500 Fairmont High School Students marched on Griffin High today to protest some scattered boos which broke out this morning in a Griffin High Chapel program while cheerleaders were being picked for next year.

Supt. D. B. Christie and Griffin High principal Tommy Jones both apologized for the boos.

There are some 600 students at Fairmont and one faculty member today estimated only 20 to 30 remained at the school. The rest, under the banner of the school flag, marched to the Griffin campus to protest.

They were met at the main entrance at Griffin High by Supt. Christie. He invited them to go to the Griffin auditorium where they could talk.

He said he apologized for the conduct of some of the students at the Griffin High Chapel program this morning. But he said there always had been trouble makers in any group and this was no exception.

Mr. Christie said he had attended more of the chapel programs at Fairmont than at Griffin High this year in his efforts to work out a smooth consolidation of the Griffin and Fairmont schools next year.

He said he probably should have spent more time at Griffin High so he would have known what was going on there.

There is no race question in working out this problem, Mr. Christie said.

"There is only one race — the human race," he said. He said he would continue to work with both student bodies in working out the changes next fall.

When Mr. Christie was finished, a student yelled from the audience, "You apologized, what about the principal?"

Mr. Christie called Mr. Jones to the stage. He said he was "awfully sorry" for what had happened at the chapel program at Griffin High this morning.

He said he had suggested that the word "Bears" be used in some of the cheers this morning so students could become accustomed to it. He said Bears would be the official mascot when the two schools are consolidated next fall.

Mr. Jones said some of the students, mostly seniors, had booed when the Bear cheers were used this morning.

He said disciplinary action was under way in the incident.

When word reached the Fairmont campus this morning about the boos, most of the students marched to the Griffin High campus.

C. W. Daniels, Fairmont principal, talked with the students this afternoon at Griffin High. He reminded them that their conduct would reflect on their school and their parents and urged them to conduct themselves with good manners.

Mr. Christie called Coach Johnny Goodrum, a Negro faculty member to the stage. He revealed to the students that Coach Goodrum would be recommended as an assistant principal for Griffin High.

The coach and former driver education teacher called for calmness and order.

Otie Head Jr., president of the Fairmont student body, urged the students to return to their classes after they had heard from faculty and student leaders.

Mr. Christie said since it was raining, he had ordered several buses to come to the Griffin High campus to take the students back to their classes.

While the students waited for the buses to arrive, Head President and Head coach participated in a forum in which several students made short statements from the auditorium floor.

When the buses arrived, the students scampered through the rain to board them.

A few officers from the Griffin Police Department were on the campus and in the auditorium as a precaution against trouble.

In urging the students to return to their classes, President Head told them, "You got what you came for."

Then he suggested they go back to class orderly.
More than 500 Fairmont High School Students marched on Griffin High today to protest some scattered boos which broke out this morning in a Griffin High Chapel program while cheerleaders were being picked for next year.

Supt. D. B. Christie and Griffin High principal Tommy Jones both apologized for the boos.

There are some 600 students at Fairmont and one faculty member today estimated only 29 to 30 remained at the school. The rest, under the banner of the school flag, marched to the Griffin campus to protest.

They were met at the main entrance at Griffin High by Supt. Christie. He invited them to go to the Griffin auditorium where they could talk.

Rain had begun to fall on the students. Mr. Christie said he would have invited them into the auditorium, regardless of whether it had been raining. He said he needed to get them together so he could talk to them.

When the superintendent first attempted to speak, the students booed him.
Mrs. Virginia Ball, a counselor at Fairmont High, stepped on the stage and quieted the students. She asked them to listen to Supt. Christie and a hush slowly fell over the audience.

Finally when the students were quiet, Mr. Christie stepped to the microphone.

He said he was sorry they booed him. He said he never had booed anyone in his life. But he said he was glad they had come to the auditorium so he could talk with them.

He said he apologized for the conduct of some of the students at the Griffin High chapel program this morning. But he said there always had been trouble makers in any group and this was no exception.

Mr. Christie said he had attended more of the chapel programs at Fairmont than at Griffin High this year in his efforts to work out a smooth consolidation of the Griffin and Fairmont schools next year.

He said he probably should have spent more time at Griffin High so he would have known what was going on there.

There is no race question in working out this problem, Mr. Christie said.
“There is only one race — the human race,” he said. He said he would continue to work with both student bodies in working out the changes next fall.

When Mr. Christie was finished, a student yelled from the audience, “You apologized, what about the principal?”

Mr. Christie called Mr. Jones to the stage. He said he was “awfully sorry” for what had happened at the chapel program at Griffin High this morning.

He said he had suggested that the word “Bears” be used in some of the cheers this morning so students could become accustomed to it. He said Bears would be the official mascot when the two schools are consolidated next fall.

Mr. Jones said some of the students, mostly seniors, had booed when the Bear cheers were used this morning.

He said disciplinary action was under way in the incident.

Fairmont Principal Makes GHS Apology

C. W. Daniels, principal of Fairmont High School, today apologized to a group of more than 200 Griffin High students for a march by Fairmont students on the Griffin High campus last Friday.

The Griffin High students gathered in the auditorium to declare their grievances after a group, under a Confederate flag, had marched about the Griffin High campus and in some of the buildings.

Not only did the students shout for a personal apology for the march, but they asked why something had not been done about a group of Griffin High students who refused to stand while the alma mater was sung in chapel last Friday.

Both Supt. D. B. Christie and Griffin High Principal Tommy Jones said the students who showed disrespect for the alma mater would be punished.

After the group had marched about the campus this morning, they gathered in the auditorium. Mrs. Champ Vance, a faculty member, talked with them and attempted to get a list of their grievances while a microphone was being connected on stage so Supt. Christie could talk with them.

misbehavior right now." He warned that any students misbehaving — black or white — would be punished.

During a question and answer session, one student rose to declare that he didn’t believe students of Griffin High owed anyone an apology. Loud cheers broke out.

Some students asked why the Fairmont students were allowed to come to the Griffin High campus and disrupt regular class schedules.

Mr. Christie said at the time of the confrontation on the campus, he thought it best that he get the students inside so he could talk with them. He said it was a decision he had to make on the spot and seemed a correct one at the time.

Mr. Christie told the students when they were older, as he is now, they would understand better why some things have to be done in situations like the one Friday. He said the Fairmont students were wrong in staging the march.

At one point during the discussions, the students broke into a chant, “We want Daniels, We want Daniels. We want Daniels!”

Mr. Christie and Mr. Jones tested the march.

He said he had planned to call the Fairmont students together to report to them what action was being taken. But the march came off before the report could be given, Mr. Daniels said.

For that reason, he said he felt an apology was due to Griffin High students for the actions of the Fairmont students.

He said he understood classes were disrupted and that lunch was delayed at Griffin High because of the demonstration by Fairmont students. He said the Fairmont students were wrong in staging the march and that’s why he issued the apology published Saturday.

Some students still wanted to know what would be done about those who refused to stand for the Griffin High alma mater. Mr. Christie and Mr. Jones told them that a meeting had been scheduled this morning — at the very time the Griffin High demonstration broke out — to take up the matter.

The school leaders said that names were being taken and those not showing respect for the alma mater would be punished.

As the students continued to pepper the school men with questions, Mr. Christie pointed his finger at the group and told them they had five minutes to return to classes.

“If you don’t, you are going home for the rest of the year,” he said. He started looking at his watch. In a few seconds, some students began to make their way for the exits and then others followed.

In several minutes the auditorium had cleared.

One younger in the auditorium who was said to be a leader in the demonstration was not a student at Griffin High. A school official escorted him from the auditorium and off the campus following the demonstration.

The march by Fairmont students last Friday on the Griffin High campus was triggered when some boys broke out against the use of a school cheer for the Bears, mascot for the new Griffin High which will be organized in the fall.

The cheers in chapel at Griffin High were part of a program to select cheerleaders for next year.

After several students had spoken, Mrs. Vance said as she understood it, one of the grievances was that they wanted an apology from Fairmont. Before she could finish the sentence, she was interrupted by a loud yell from the students.

The group that gathered in the auditorium at first had about 50 students in it. But as word spread through the school's halls, more students left their classrooms to join in the demonstration.

As groups came through the auditorium doors to join, they were cheered loudly by those already inside.

Coach Max Dowis stood at the auditorium entrance. When some groups of students asked if they could go in, he told them to either go in the auditorium or go back to their classes.

They wanted to know if they would be expelled if they went in the auditorium. Mr. Dowis said he didn’t know but it was possible they would be.

Some of the students left, saying they didn’t want to risk being expelled.

Mr. Christie, facing protesting students for the second time in four days told the group, “I’m blowing the whistle on misbehavior right now.”
He warned that any students misbehaving — black or white — would be punished.

Mr. Christie and Mr. Jones reminded the protesters that Mr. Daniels had issued a formal apology Saturday to the Griffin High students not involved in the trouble last Friday.
The students answered that a statement through the newspaper was not sufficient. They said they wanted him to come in person.

The students were told that Mr. Daniels was on his way to the auditorium and would be there in about a minute. They cheered.

Meanwhile, both Mr. Christie and Mr. Jones told the students they wanted them to show respect for Mr. Daniels when he came.

When Mr. Daniels appeared on the stage, a hush fell over the audience.

He told them that he and some student representatives along with other school officials had hoped to prevent the march on the Griffin High campus last Friday but that it occurred before students could receive a report on what was taking place.

Mr. Daniels said the students and school officials had learned of the so called misbehavior in Griffin High chapel Friday and were attempting to establish communications to avert a protest march.

Prior to his death in 1932, Chicago businessman and Sears co-owner Julius Rosenwald was known for donating millions of dollars for the establishment of schools for African-Americans in the rural South through the Rosenwald Fund. Those approximately 5,000 schools have informally been known as Rosenwald Schools, and as it turns out, one of them is located in Griffin.

Built during the Great Depression, the old Fairmont School on the corner of Third Street and Jefferson Avenue, which saw its last graduating class in 1970 before merging with Griffin High School, is the 50th Rosenwald School still standing, according to Jeanne Cyrique, African-American programs coordinator with the Historic Preservation Division of the Georgia Department of Natural Resources. Cyrique first noticed the connection in July of last year.

Spalding County Parks & Recreation Director Louis Greene stands in front of the old Fairmont School at the corner of Third Street and Jefferson Avenue. It was recently discovered that the school was a Rosenwald School, which makes it a significant part of African-American history.

"It's kind of special. It's very significant for the African-American community," she said, as she spoke to past graduates of Fairmont School during a visit in Griffin Tuesday.

"This is something we are excited about," said Shirley Gardner, chaplain of the Fairmont High Alumni Association.

"We can't know where we are going if we don't know where we came from."

One the local school system transfers the property to Spalding County, county officials could decide to apply for a grant already available to secure and stabilize the old school.

The building has been unoccupied and is deteriorating, said Louis Greene, director of the Spalding County Parks & Recreation Department, which would be operating the building for the county if it is restored.

If such plans become reality, the original Rosenwald School would serve as a Black History Museum, an adjacent building could be turned into a community center and the school's old gym, which was also added later in time, might be used as a banquet hall, said Greene.

"We can see the use for it, we've just got to find the funds," he said.

Fairmont School's history as a Rosenwald School will be featured on WSB-TV's "People 2 People," which will air Sunday at 6:30 a.m.

Negro High School. One story, brick, four class rooms and two home economics laboratories, cannery in separate building with one class room. War surplus buildings being erected behind school for increased facilities without adequate construction force so that buildings are rapidly deteriorating due to weathering, only institution of type in entire county, athletic field requires treatment, no dressing rooms, sanitary facilities very poor, generally neglected by municipal services including trash and garbage collection creating health hazard.

To bring the present school plant of the Griffin special school district up to modern standards and adequate for future needs will require additions to all white elementary school buildings and the construction of an entirely new white high school plant to include gymnasium, field house, administration and an auditorium. The present negro school plant for elementary grades should be entirely abandoned and new structures erected on improved sites. The main building of the negro high school should be enlarged and a field house constructed for the athletic field. The present Spring Hill school should not be replaced, but provision be made in the new Broad Street school to accommodate these pupils.

Any additions or changes in the present school plant should be made, not in the light of present conditions, but in the forecasting of probable demands upon the system within the life of any new structures or additions to be made. A study of the present school population and the local birth rate over the past few years will reveal the demands that will be made. Population studies

Rosenwald schools:
• Schools that were built between 1912 and 1932 by African American communities that received technical and financial assistance from Julius Rosenwald (mostly via the Rosenwald Fund)
Extraordinary vision of Rosenwald and Washington:

- required local drive
- leveraged support from local school boards
- self-help aspect of the school building projects
- bound communities tightly to their new schools
Rosenwald Fund officials recognized a number of shortcomings in education for blacks in the South:

- a lack of adequately paid, trained teachers
- the absence of high schools for blacks
- schools for rural blacks were open for an average of only four months per year
- the poor condition of African American elementary school facilities
• Rosenwald insisted right from the beginning that his donation would only be made if it was matched by local residents (most of whom were poor blacks who skeptics said could never come up with adequate funds).
• Insisted that beneficiaries do their own large part in improving their lot.
• And despite their limited resources, thousands of rural black communities succeeded in pulling together the funds to match Rosenwald’s gift. Poignant stories have been recorded of black laborers emptying bags of old coins, representing years of savings, to underwrite these schools. Sharecroppers set aside a “Rosenwald Patch” when they planted their cotton. Innumerable pie sales and fried chicken suppers were organized to raise matching funds. During construction, many black families donated materials or invested sweat equity via their labor.
• Retrospective calculations show that, in the end, black families contributed slightly more than Rosenwald to the schools—16 percent of total costs, versus 15 percent from his fund.
In the process of doing oral history interviews with Rosenwald school alumni and former teachers, I also came to see that they used many effective pedagogical practices that I think are undervalued currently. Teaching practices of that era in both African American and white schools employed music, public speaking, drama and peer learning. As a teacher, I think we do well to revisit these methods. Most of all, I want my students and colleagues to know that education is something that African Americans have always shaped and owned.

By 1928, one in every five rural schools for black students in the South was a Rosenwald school, and these schools housed one third of the region's rural black schoolchildren and teachers.
• More than 663,615 students were instructed over the course of the programs’ 20 years.

• Added 4,000 libraries to existing schools.

• The network of new public schools subsequently employed more than 14,000 teachers.

• At the program's conclusion in 1932, it had produced 4,977 new schools, 217 teachers' homes, and 163 shop buildings, constructed at a total cost of $28,408,520 to serve 663,615 students in 883 counties of 15 states.
In Georgia

- The Fund supported the construction of 242 vocational schools for African American children in the state from 1912 to 1932.
- More than 35,000 students were taught in the 242 school buildings constructed in Georgia with assistance from the Rosenwald Fund.
- The Fund required that grant recipients meet specific minimum standards for the site size and length of school term, and have new blackboards and desks for each classroom.
- School grants were based on the number of teachers employed, ranging from $500 for a one-teacher building to a maximum $2,100 for a school for ten or more teachers.
• From 1921 to 1931, the Fund also offered grants of $200 per classroom for additions to existing Rosenwald schools.
Legacy of the Rosenwald Schools
• During the Great Depression many southern communities built with the now familiar Rosenwald designs.

• Cost-conscious designs made them useful to states that were rapidly expanding their public school infrastructure.
• Cost-conscious school administrators borrowed freely from Rosenwald plans in developing their own state-approved school designs.

• Thanks to the design, many southern white and black children learned in classrooms that looked and felt the same - open, bright, orderly, clean.

• Today, only about 10 percent of the buildings constructed remain standing, and many are in serious disrepair.

• The National Trust for Historic Preservation named Rosenwald schools to its list of America’s 11 Most Endangered Historic Places in 2002.

The black-white gap in schooling among southern-born men narrowed sharply between the world wars. From 1914 to 1931, nearly 5,000 schools were constructed as part of the Rosenwald Rural Schools Initiative. Using census data and World War II records, we find that the Rosenwald program accounts for a sizable portion of the educational gains of rural southern blacks. We find significant effects on school attendance, literacy, years of schooling, cognitive test scores, and northern migration. The gains are highest in the most disadvantaged counties, suggesting that schooling treatments have the largest impact among those with limited access to education.

Since the pathbreaking work of Schultz (1961) and Becker (1964), it has been well recognized that investment in human capital is a primary

• From 1914 to 1931, nearly 5,000 school buildings were constructed, serving approximately 36 percent of the Black rural school-aged Southern population by 1930.

• The Rosenwald program accounts for at least 30 percent of the sizable educational gains of Southern Blacks born during the 1910s and 1920s.

• Army General Classification Test (AGCT) showed that access to the schools significantly improved cognitive skills.

• In the longer run, exposure to the schools raised the wages of Blacks who remained in the South relative to Whites in the South by about 35 percent.

• Translates into a private rate of return to a year of additional schooling of about 17 percent.
• Rosenwald significantly increased northbound migration of young adult Blacks, likely fueling further income gains.

• Across all outcomes, the improvements were highest in counties with the lowest levels of Black school attendance suggesting that schooling treatments can have a very large impact among those with limited access to education.

Conclusions

• Unable to determine where the Fairmont Subdivision got its name

• First occurrence of the name “Fairmont” found in court records: Oct 19, 1927; in the Griffin Daily News: Oct 22, 1927

• First occurrence of the name “Fairmont High School” in the Griffin Daily News: Sept 16, 1949

• Brown v. Board of Education was probably the most famous case ever decided by the Supreme Court
• Brown v. Board of Education was the first step in major reform of not only public education but also race laws and policies in almost all aspects of American life

• Oral histories by African Americans could contribute significantly to our understanding of local history
